Introduction

Assalamu'alaikum warahmatullahi wabarakatuh.

In an increasingly interconnected global world, proficiency in the English language has become a necessity. The book "Easy English Basic for Islamic Higher Education" serves as a specialized guide on Grammar and Tenses to strengthen understanding of essential grammar rules and tenses crucial for building a strong foundation in English. With a focus on the context of Islamic education, this book is designed to provide a deep understanding while maintaining relevant Islamic values and contexts.

From constructing simple sentences to gaining a profound understanding of tenses, this book offers a systematic and easily comprehensible learning approach for higher education students. By blending a strong grasp of grammar with a rich Islamic context, it is hoped that this book will not only enhance English language skills but also deepen the appreciation of Islamic values in the learning process. In an increasingly complex higher education environment, this

Part I Introduction to English Grammar

Chapter 1 Introducing yourself

When you meet a new friend, it is very polite to tell your name. There are many ways how to introduce yourself in English.

You can say:

Hi, my name is Rudi. What is your name?

Hello, I am Rudi, and you are?

Hi, I'm Rudi, and you?

The first example is introducing yourself in a formal occasion. And the last example is most commonly used when introducing yourself to a friend of the same age.

You can also say with additional information about yourself

Hi, I'm Rudi.

I'm from Bandung and now I live in Jakarta.

Nice to meet you.
